Prevention Set For Week Of October 6

Washington—President Hoover today issued a proclamation recommending the observance of the week of October 6 as Fire Prevention week. It has been the custom for the President of the United States to recommend the observance of Fire Prevention week throughout the nation and to designate the week in which the anniversary of the great Chicago fire occurred for such observance," the proclamation said.

The fine interest manifested in fire prevention by public officials, business men's organizations and the general public has already borne fruit. For two consecutive years fire losses in the United States have been decreased and there are indications of a further reduction during the present year. A great reduction of this tremendous waste could be effected through the exercise of ordinary care on the part of our citizens.

Therefore, I, Herbert Hoover, President of the United States do hereby proclaim the week of October 6 to be observed as Fire Prevention week. Each citizen I recommend full cooperation in securing wider understanding of individual responsibility which is only through further elimination of human negligence that lasting peace can be attained."

Man Convicted On Liquor Charge

E. K. Kelly, Seymour, was found guilty of a charge of possession intoxicating liquor by a jury of the Clark Circuit Court Friday and was fined a total of $100 and sentenced sixty days to the Clark County jail, after a jury had deliberated about fifteen minutes.

According to testimony introduced at the hearing, Kelly, first attracted the attention of the police, several weeks ago, when he violated a parking ordinance in the City. After arresting Kelly on a charge of violating the parking laws of the City, Police testified they searched his car and found two gallon-jugs of colored moonshine.

A motion to suppress the evidence in the case Thursday was overruled by Judge Kopp. The liquor was introduced to the jury Friday morning as evidence in the case.

Bridge Opening For Hoover Not Thought Probable

Edward H. West, secretary of the Louisville Bridge Commission, reported Friday that from a survey of the amount of work yet to be done on the new Louisville Municipal Bridge, it is improbable that the structure will be completed by October 23 in time for an opening celebration when President Hoover visits Louisville.

"I would not say that it is impossible, but in view of the work ahead and the time left before the date set for the President's arrival, it appears that the opening cannot be made to coincide with his visit," the secretary explained.

The contract date for completion of the bridge is December.

Lindberghs Start 7,000-Mile Air Journey, Friday

Miami, Fla.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off from Pan-American Airport here at 9:05 a. m. on the first leg of his projected 7,000-mile flight around the air route of the Caribbean Sea.

The plane took the air gracefully and headed south for Havana, its first stop.

He carried seven passengers and a crew of four, including himself. The plane is carrying 135 pounds of special mail for the east coast of South America and will be flown over the extension of the route to Dutch Guiana. Weather reports indicated a perfect voyage, and Lindbergh left in high elation at the prospect of retracing his good will journey of a year and a half ago over the West Indies to South America and returning through Central America.

Juan T. Trippe, president of Pan American Airways and Mrs. Trippe, Mrs. Lindbergh, Glenn H. Curtiss, pioneer aviation developer, and two newspaper correspondents were aboard at the start of the flight. Curtiss is a passenger to Havana, the first stop on today's flight. The correspondents will accompany the party to San Juan, Porto Rico.

Colonel Lindbergh, as usual, wore a business suit as he stepped into the cockpit. Mrs. Lindbergh was delighted at the prospect of making the Caribbean circle voyage with her husband.

Problems Of Wh Are Like

New York—Frayed linen, rickety chairs and all the other torments which embarrass housewives, are for present with the Mistress of the White House, just the same as the average woman, according to Mrs. Calvin Coolidge.

Writing of her days in the White House, Mrs. Coolidge tells, in American Magazine, of a tea given to the wives of Cabinet members which she shared embarrassment with one of her guests.

"We were busily talking over of tea," says Mrs. Coolidge, "when I noticed one of the ladies tucking a tea napkin into her bag. I made a tactful note that I would tell her about before she left in order to spare her the embarrassment of finding it when she reached home. A few minutes later, the lady with the bag was speaking, and the others were giving strict attention. She put her hand into her bag. I saw a puzzled expression come over her face and amuse myself by getting the better of me. 'You may as well bring it right out, for I saw you put it in,' I said. With that she drew a little Madeira square and held it up in astonishment. She had thought it was one of her husband's handkerchiefs which she had brought along because she had a slight cold, but it was a White House napkin and—it was full of holes!"

Mrs. Coolidge relates how, on another occasion, a formal state dinner for unusually distinguished guests, one of the White House dining room chairs cracked beneath the weight of a portly official and the cane seat sagged through; how another guest's tipped snappily from its mooring; how another sedate guest melted his temporary dental work with his spoonful of hot soup and was obliged to resort to facial contortions to conceal his plight.
