

go ahead with its investigation, prohibition enforcement agencies would be given as little publicity as possible. That was the plan.

Modified Program

The President has modified his own program somewhat, broadening the investigation to include all forms of law violation, and asking Congress for an investigation as to reorganization, instead of asking directly for the transfer he had proposed originally. These changes, if anything were effective in keeping these particular activities less prominent.

But events worked against the President's plan, beginning with the I'm Alone incident and ending most recently with the program of placing prohibition courses in public schools, which he, himself, stopped when he learned about it.

Prohibition was front-page news for days and days, instead of being in the background, as the President had intended.

Unemployment May Be Studied After Census Is Taken

Washington— President Hoover will call a conference on unemployment as soon as the unemployment census returns are in, it is believed here.

Labor, newspaper of the railway organization, today notes a letter from Hoover to J. C. Lewis, president of the Iowa State Federation of Labor, in which the President says:

"I believe it desirable that an exhaustive inquiry should be made into the subject 'unemployment'. I am in hopes that when some of the momentarily pressing problems of the administration are out of the way, we will be able to take it up.

Lewis had written the President inclosing a resolution adopted by the annual convention of the Iowa federation in which Hoover was requested to call in conference "outstanding men and women conversant with the needs of various groups to the end that the growing army of the unemployed, due to the encroachments of the machine age, may be given permanent relief."

Inasmuch as the 1930 census will give data on unemployment by order of congress, it is thought unlikely that any conference will be called until that data is tabulated, probably about a year from now.
