

morning sessions, 8 to 11:30 o'clock; afternoon sessions, 12:55 to 2:43 o'clock.

Saturday's classes are called at 7:15 o'clock with dismissal at 12:30 o'clock.

"By working overtime with an intensive program, we expect to finish the year's work a little later than usual about the middle of July, thanks to the fine help of WPA," Prof. McCullum said.

The Taylor Colored High School, last of the city's schools to resume operations, is scheduled to reopen Tuesday morning.

Visits to the city's churches showed practically all of them with at least some clean sanctuary, where services can be held under conditions approaching normal, but the work yet to be done in most of them is still staggering.

Men filled cleaning mud smeared floors and walls, while women workers washed windows, doors and furniture.

The main auditorium of St. Anthony's Catholic Church has lost its carpets, but pews are back in place on bare floors and the altar and its furnishings are in order.

At Wall Street M. E. church auditorium pews are in place and the rostrum is decorated with potted plants to give a touch of cheerfulness to the dull, washed-out tones left by the flood. The Swartz auditorium annex has been cleaned by WPA for use of the American Red Cross.

Workmen are busy at St. Augustine's Catholic Church reflooring the main edifice. The church and rectory have had intensive cleaning.

At the First Christian Church warped floors of the church auditorium have been cleaned, but pews are still piled upon each other and the organ lies in ruins on the rostrum.

At the First Presbyterian Church, the floor of the main auditorium came loose and floated in the flood, keeping the sanctuary above water. The church is being cleaned preparatory to reflooring. Meanwhile services are conducted in another part of the building. A crew of women WPA workers were busy Monday in Taggart parish house, cleaning furniture, windows and woodwork.

At St. Luke's Evangelical and Reformed Church, the sanctuary has been cleaned and camp chairs have replaced the pews.

Although it had been announced that use of Maple Street M. E. Church will be abandoned because repair costs would be prohibitive, WPA workmen were busy cleaning it Monday as well as every other flood-damaged house of worship in the city.

JOHN BEST VISITS CITY

Mr. John Best, well known former business man of Jeffersonville, and now of Los Angeles, Calif., is a visitor in the city, looking after his property interests which suffered damage in the flood.

The Soviet railway administration already has severed connections between its Ussuri railway and the eastern part of the North Manchuria railway, part of the Manchukuo national system. The connection was broken when the Russians charged Japanese and Manchukuo authorities persecuted their workers at the junction point.

LOAN PARLEY SET AT INDIANAPOLIS

City Officials To Interview Gov. Wednesday

Application for a loan from the State to finance the City government for this year, will be made by Mayor Allen W. Jacobs, City Attorney Joseph H. Warder and City Clerk John A. Kennedy at a conference with Governor M. Clifford Townsend, at Indianapolis, at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, it was announced today.

City governmental cost approximates $110,000 annually, of which $90,000 is raised from real estate and personalty taxes.

The loan will be sought from a $1,000,000 revolving fund created by the last Legislature to provide for flood stricken communities.

The amount of the loan to be sought has not been determined, as officials were endeavoring to estimate how great a return city taxes would yield during the year.

INDUSTRY ABSORBS 1200 NYA WORKERS

Private Employment Attracts Students

During the last year 1,200 young men and women employed by the National Youth Administration have left their projects to enter private employment, it was announced at a meeting of the State NYA Advisory Committee in Indianapolis.

In March, last year, 4,457 young men and women were employed, while the total for March, 1937, is 3,251.

In thirty-eight colleges there are 3,742 NYA students, including 2,567 men and 1,175 women, earning an average of $12.62 a month. The total monthly earnings for this group are $44,979.99.

There are 654 High Schools participating in the program and a total of $29,850.89 is paid in monthly wages. The 3,370 boys and 3,140 girls earn an average of $4.59 a month, it was stated.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Logan of Indianapolis, were guests Sunday of Mr. Logan's sister, Mrs. T. R. Thornley.

asking for the extent of sustained losses to all concerned.

Approximately 400 questionnaires were mailed, although only 56 replies have been received, according to Mr. Richardson.

The data collected is to be used by a committee, to be named later, in a campaign at Washington, in urging the passage of Joint Resolution No. 332, which proposes to make $50,000,000 immediately available for flood stricken communities.

When a hearing on the measure is held before a joint committee of Senators and Congressmen, it is planned to have a delegation from the Business men's Association present to further interest in its passage.

Senator Sherman Minton informed the committee from the group, which recently went to Washington seeking enactment of the measure, that a hearing will be held soon at a joint session of the lawmakers.

Judge George C. Kopp will preside at the meeting tomorrow night.

H. N. CROOKER TO SPEAK AT ROTARY

H. N. Crooker, superintendent of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company's plant, will be guest speaker at the meeting of the Rotary Club to be held Tuesday evening, at the Board of Trade Hall, it was announced by Dr. Allen V. Voiers, chairman of the entertainment committee for the current month.

Mr. Crooker will outline the policies of the institution and will tell the group of the program that is mapped for the immediate future, it was stated.

A one hundred per cent meeting in attendance is expected.

John A. Cody, Sr., To Speak At Seymour

John A. Cody, Sr., of New Albany, Works Progress Administrator for the Fifth District of the WPA, will be guest speaker at a meeting of the teachers of the Adult Educational Division of the WPA, to be held Tuesday morning, at Seymour, Indiana, it was announced.

Attention Advertisers

The News and Journal has removed its headquarters, which were located temporarily in the law offices of Owen Voigt, on the second floor of the News & Journal Building, to its own offices on the first floor. Advertisers wishing to announce the opening of their business or place other copy in the newspapers are requested to call in person or telephone 23.

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

"A HEART-RENDING CALAMITY"

"As the treacherous elements were receding last Saturday evening, it added a thrill of horror and despair to the citizens residing at Walnut and Maple Streets when they heard the pitiable call for help coming from a party who were out pleasure riding. Investigation led to the fact that four persons, Norris Wright, Charles Long, and the Misses Mollie and Annie Stark, were the occupants in the flat, and as they were endeavoring to round the corner, their frail craft became unmanageable, striking a lamp post with such fearful velocity that the four were instantaneously precipitated in the river. The two unfortunate girls were hurled with the current and drowned in fully twelve feet of water. Wright and Long succeeded in catching hold of the lamp post and remained in their perilous position until Mr. Charles Saunders, who resides in the Montgomery property, went to their succor and they were safely landed. Search was made for the unfortunate girls all of Saturday night but with no avail. On Sunday at 2:00 o'clock P. M. one of the girls, Miss Annie, the eldest, was found on Court Avenue by Daniel Thomas and Joseph Fitzpatrick.

"The body of Annie Stark (Continued on page three)"

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

Police Chase Driver Across

Following a minor accident in the Louisville approach, Municipal Bridger was chased by police almost to shore. Dannie Freeman, 847 Quality Street, was charged with driving in a public place at 8 o'clock night.

An automobile he sideswiped a J. bound bus, drive Hendricks, 34, of ple Street, Jeffer

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

Technicalities Hamper State Progress

Flood-stricken ing to avail themselves of the $1,000,000 revolving fund, set up by the Legislature, encountered an entanglement. The State Board of Administration in Indianapolis made to act on the first day of the month.

Clark County's $196,711 for over the fiscal year 1937 will be a source of loss of anti-flood money. They found that local municipalities must exhaust local channels but the most important fact that the need 2 per cent limit for bond approval of taxpayers. The law also in the present bond issue be deducted amount allowed in situational limitations. The amount to be a state loan.

ing the situation. We would insure the maternal interests of our citizens, and keep away enterprise, by speaking gloomily of the future. People talk lightly when they say we cannot recover from the disaster that has overtaken us. Courage will be at a very low ebb when it is ready to sit down supinely and await starvation or death from enmity. We would rather perish bravely fighting the foe, than fall in retreat. The act is that the most of us are here, and here we must stay. Since sad experience teaches us we cannot now be sure of exemption from floods any year, then let us prepare to conquer. First, let all repairs that are made be of the most substantial nature. In fixing fences put the posts deep in the earth. Anchor everything securely to the earth, and let experience teach our people all things necessary to neutralize the damage of the water. In the future, in building homes, let the people seek the high lands on Spring Hill, and out toward Claysburg, where there is no probability of the flood reaching them. There is plenty of high land in the eastern portion of the city and in Port Fulton. If people, after our experience in 1883, pursue their old way of doing things, the future sufferers will be their own fault. For our part we are not ready to give up the good old town of Jeff yet. We think there is a good deal standard in her, and we propose to run up the standard of ambition and industry till we are driven to the top of the knobs. Then we propose to go in partnership with Bill Taylor and fish for a living."

Police Chase Driver Across

Following a minor accident in the Louisville approach, Municipal Bridger was chased by police almost to shore. Dannie Freeman, 847 Quality Street, was charged with driving in a public place at 8 o'clock night.

An automobile he sideswiped a J. bound bus, drive Hendricks, 34, of ple Street, Jeffer